The situation, however, is virtually unchanged, though the exchange of notes has given an insight into affairs in Germany and has perhaps hastened her internal reforms. The next answer will have to be a military answer from her military authorities.

The French people feel that the question of the internal government of Germany is not so important as an assurence against a recurrence of Germany's milituristic policies, which precipitated the war.

We do not know how sincere Germany is about her international reforms. We have reason to doubt the sincerity of her aims in this direction. The great thing for us is to make
